Overview

Kate D'Agostino is passionate about her commercial real estate finance practice. She works primarily with large commercial lenders on a wide variety of projects, including industrial and warehouse buildings, apartment complexes, office buildings, shopping malls and other retail centers, hotels, medical office facilities, age-restricted, multifamily and other residential developments, residential and commercial condominiums, restaurants, manufacturing facilities, and other commercial projects.

Kate enjoys building close and ongoing relationships with her clients, which include institutional investors (including national insurance companies), pension fund managers, national and local real estate developers, banks, individual investors, and other debt and equity providers. She has particular experience in:

- Loan originations
- Multistate transactions
- Project development, acquisition, and permanent financings
- Construction loans
- Syndicated and securitized loans
- Participation agreements
- Joint ventures
- Mezzanine financing

- Franchise financing transactions

Kate has worked with lenders in the real estate industry through all phases of the economic cycles and can also represent clients on forbearances, loan workouts and other modifications, foreclosures and bankruptcies, restructuring of loans, and loan sales. She also acts as local counsel for Connecticut and New York real estate transactions.

Kate regularly participates in industry activities, including those organized by the Real Estate Finance Association (REFA). When she's not working, she loves travel, running, and retired racing greyhounds.
