Overview

Austin Jackson's practice focuses on complex securities litigation, commercial litigation, and enforcement matters involving the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Department of Justice, the Financial Industry Regulatory Authority, and various state attorneys general offices.

Austin also conducts internal investigations for entities and boards of directors related to securities laws, anti-corruption, and anti-money laundering.

In addition, Austin is dedicated to representing pro bono clients, recently securing the early release of an elderly and ailing client who had been incarcerated for more than two decades.
